Kilgallen/by Lee Israel

As a young reporter for Hearst in New York, Dorothy Kilgallen—never without little white gloves—covered murder most foul, mutilations and the nastiest accidents. Once she and a photographer even jimmied open the window of a mortuary to photograph a brutally beaten, dead lady. It was a funny occupation for a rigidly raised, good Catholic girl. But then, her father, James Kilgallen, was a Hearst star himself and he encouraged his baby to go get 'em. Go get 'em, she did.

Because of her flair and competence, Dorothy quickly became a Hearst favorite, accorded her own column—"The Voice of Broadway"—which gave her the power to ruin as well as to adulate. She did both recklessly.

On the TV program What's My Line?, despite her penchant for the rude riposte, she was often the catalyst that made the show enjoyable. And the series meant a great deal to Dorothy. After one show, Bennett Cerf found Dorothy in tears. "I haven't guessed a single occupation in three weeks," she said, sobbing.

Her private life, enviable on the surface, was in truth a sad failure. Richard Kollmar, her actor husband, was an indiscreet philanderer and a drunk. Her sloppy love affair with singer Johnnie Ray devastated her. Increasingly, she came to depend on barbiturates and alcohol. She died mysteriously. Officially, the cause was accidental barbiturate poisoning, but because she had been investigating the Kennedy assassination, many thought her death was either murder or suicide.

Lee Israel's book, burdened by a solemn and turgid prose style, survives its problems. For a simple reason: Dorothy, pathetic, frantic, lost, was limitlessly fascinating.

The Honeymooners' Companion: The Kramdens and the Nortons Revisited

Workman Publishing

If ever you were daft about The Honeymooners (with Jackie Gleason, Audrey Meadows, Art Carney, Joyce Randolph and others), then this collection of scripts, songs, plot synopses, sewer jokes, fat jokes, photographs, biographies, newspaper and magazine articles—even a Honeymooners glossary—will provide a reminiscent thrill. Much of it remains comical. Vide: Ralph (Gleason) boasting about a sure-fire scheme: "This is probably the biggest thing I ever got into." Alice (Meadows): "The biggest thing you ever got into was your pants." Of the definition of Raccoon Lodge in the glossary: "According to Section Two of the rules and by-laws, the entrance requirements are as follows: (1) Applicant must have earned a public-school diploma; (2) Must have been a U.S. citizen for the last six months; (3) Must pay a $1.50 initiation fee." Ed (Carney) thought the requirements too tough because they would have kept out Anthony Eden. Plus ça change, plus c'est la même chose: funny.

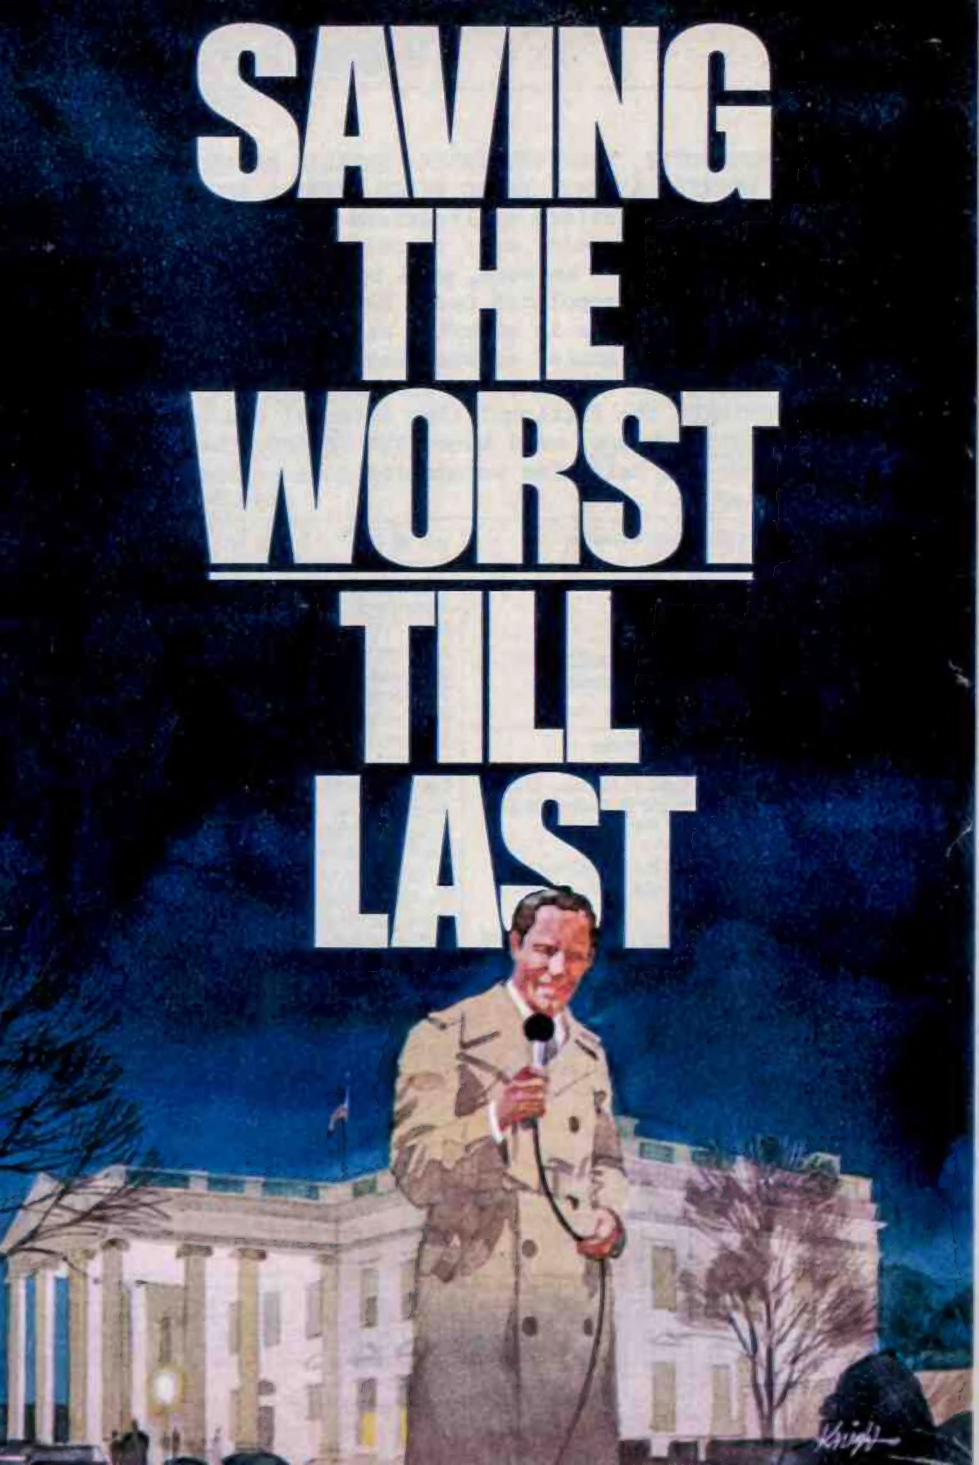
SAVING THE WORST TILL LAST



By trying to sign off impressively, TV reporters often go to embarrassing lengths

By Ron Nessen

At the end of their news stories, TV correspondents frequently feel called upon to stand in front of the camera to offer a sweeping general conclusion, based on what they have just reported, or to forecast what might happen next.

Newspaper and magazine reporters almost never offer such personal opinions at the end of their stories.

One respected news producer suggests that the standup closer is TV's equivalent of the print reporter's by-line. It is. But it's much more.

An informal survey of television standuppers over a period of several months indicates that about half simply added factual information to the report. But in the other half, the correspondents propounded a sweeping general conclusion, offered their own opinion of what the story meant, or guessed at future developments.

Ernie Leiser of CBS claims he was co-inventor of the standupper (with 60 Minutes producer Don Hewitt) in what he calls "the ancient days" of TV news, in the 1950s. Leiser says he instituted the device of showing correspondents on camera at the end of each TV news spot for three reasons: to let viewers know the reporter was really at the scene of the story, to create a stable of CBS News "stars" by making the correspondent's face familiar to the audience, and to allow the correspondent to make an interpretive point without the distraction of film filling the screen.

Leiser concedes that his brainchild is sometimes misused. Delivering a standupper on camera occasionally is just "a vanity thing" for the correspondent, he admits.

Ron Nessen, who was press secretary under President Gerald Ford, had previously been an NBC newsman.

Leiser's contemporary as a TV news pioneer, former NBC News president Reuven Frank (whose own contribution to television history was pairing Huntley and Brinkley), says he has always disliked the standup close:.

"It clutters up the show," declares Frank. He says the anchorman could say the same thing better and more briefly, leaving more air time for what Frank thinks TV news does best: showing memorable pictures of important or interesting events.

Frank is concerned that the standup closer, normally 15 or 20 seconds, is expanding and squeezing out the pictures. "Too many stories are all talk," he complains. "Too much of what we do is a guy standing outside a building telling what's going on inside."

On the other hand, Sander Vanocur, once a news star for Frank at NBC, now with ABC, thinks television news too often sacrifices illuminating on-camera commentary for the sake of pictures. As a correspondent, Vanocur says, he must constantly argue with producers to let him impart information and analysis without worrying about pictures, even if it means doing his whole story as an on-camera standupper.

Vanocur, who wrote a column of television criticism for The Washington Post for a while and frequently decries the performance of his fellow TV newscasters, complains that correspondents strive too often in their closers to be "very profound or witty." He refers to the result as the "snapper closer."

Into this category surely would fall NBC correspondent Rick Davis's closer on an otherwise straightforward story outlining the findings of a report about the assassination of South Korea's president Park Chung Hee.

"What the report does not say," Davis intoned to the camera, "is who will head a new government or how the constitution will be changed so it does not become as repressive as the old government." Snap! →

Another example of carefully crafted —and meaningless—profundity was correspondent Al Dale's standup closer for the ABC World News Tonight on a story about floods in Bandera, Texas.

"Amid the tragedy and destruction, recovery already has begun," Dale pontificated. "But it will not be completed anytime soon. And for many families here, things will never be the same."

Equally void of meaning was David Culhane's conclusion on Walter Cronkite's CBS Evening News that a rash of football injuries was "creating a pressure for change that cannot be ignored." Ignored by whom? Pressure from whom? What kind of change?

Such empty rhetoric masquerading as comment or analysis has made TV correspondents the butt of satirical jokes. Even a CBS producer snickers at what she calls the "it's-too-soon-to-say-what-it-all-means" standupper.

This producer believes the standup closer is appropriate only when the correspondent adds important information that was not covered in the filmed portion of the story. But too often, she says, the closer is "fatuous."

William Hill, a longtime NBC News producer, now working on Prime Time Saturday in Los Angeles, has advised correspondents for years to avoid fatuous closers by automatically eliminating the final sentence of their standupper. In that final sentence, Hill believes, the reporter is often tempted to carry his story one step too far.

Steve Bell, news anchorman on ABC's Good Morning America, agrees. He says too many correspondents file stories with "extraneous" closers. More and more, Bell reports, these are being chopped off.

Bell, who appeared in hundreds of standup closers as a field correspondent before becoming an anchorman, says the most common shortcoming of the genre is the tendency of reporters to "overreach for conclusions."

Indeed, on almost any evening, correspondents can be seen on network and local TV news shows, overreaching by enunciating sweeping generalized conclusions based on minor events.

Penny Mickelbury on WJLA-TV in Washington, D.C., wound up a routine account of black reaction to Andrew Young's resignation with the broad pronouncement that President Carter might survive the political damage "if he can persuade Ted Kennedy to stay in the Senate." Ernie Leiser, the self-proclaimed inventor of the standupper, believes that good correspondents avoid such pseudo-weighty closers.

But even the good ones do it sometimes. NBC's Betty Rollin concluded an extended "Segment Three" report on NBC Nightly News, about the problems confronting wives who work and also keep house, with this standup closer: "Is it worth it? For many women the answer seems to be yes." Rollin reached that encompassing conclusion based on film reports showing only four case histories.

Perhaps Rollin's conclusion is correct. But she failed to present enough evidence to justify her contention that "many women" find the difficulties of pursuing both a career and marriage "worth it." Certainly, by choosing two different working wives for illustration, Rollin could as easily have concluded that "many women" felt the difficulties are not worth it.

The Rollin story demonstrates the primary reason why television news reports so often conclude with a sweeping generality while newspaper and magazine articles seldom do. Rollin was trapped by television's dependence on pictures of specific people and events to illustrate complex or abstract issues.

While the print press can report, say, on the welfare program with statistics and a generalized overview of 3.5 million welfare families, television must show a specific welfare family—not necessarily a typical one.

And while newspapers and maga- → zines can print long, fact-laden examinations of home-heating-oil supplies in New England, for instance, TV must handle that story by finding an interesting 30-second exchange at a congressional hearing or by pitting an oil-industry spokesman against a consumer in matching 10-second sound bites.

Television correspondents attempt to compensate for the narrow episodic, anecdotal focus of their stories by delivering expansive general conclusions in their on-camera closers.

This was never more clearly demonstrated than in television's coverage of the Vietnam War. In that scattered and confusing conflict without front lines, TV correspondents rarely knew how the skirmish they were filming fitted into a broader picture of the war's progress. Nevertheless, in their battlefield closers, they repeatedly drew sweeping conclusions from minor firefights.

This overreaching in Vietnam standuppers was recalled by a National Archives/Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars retrospective of TV war coverage on the 10th anniversary of the Tet Offensive. Television war correspondents were invited to watch and comment on the stories they had filed during the fighting. Some cringed in embarrassment as they watched grainy kinescopes of their standuppers, which, after 10 years, often appeared pompous, overblown or just plain wrong.

One war correspondent frankly admitted to the Archives audience that he could not recall the evidence for his dramatic prediction that the fate of a besieged Marine base at Khe Sanh would be decided in a monumental battle whose outcome would be written in the history books "in blood and death." Actually, there were a number of battles and skirmishes at Khe Sanh, none decisive. And the North Vietnamese eventually withdrew.

TV's peculiar desire to predict the future sometimes tempts television correspondents to go out on a limb in their closers when they can't possibly know the outcome. The Khe Sanh story was one example. Two notable recent examples were the TV coverage of the Shah of Iran's struggle to retain his throne and of the conclaves that elected Popes John Paul I and II.

Television reporters usually load their forecasts with qualifiers to avoid being flat-out wrong. Thus, the words "might," "may," "could," "probably," "possibly," and "if" show up with high frequency in on-camera closers.

John Dancy of NBC may have set a record for caution in his closer on a Presidential news conference in which he said Jimmy Carter "seemed" to suggest he "could" call Congress back to a special session but the chances of that happening were "probably" lower after the election.

Even such a first-rate TV reporter as Dan Rather of CBS fully hedged his bets in a standupper on Sen. Charles Percy's tough reelection race in Illinois. Quoting unnamed political observers, Rather cautiously predicted "a large voter turnout may yet prove the polls wrong while a small turnout on Election Day probably will mean defeat for Percy."

Such on-the-one-hand-on-the-other-hand mush is common in closers.

Despite the obvious shortcomings of many standuppers and the apparent decision by some TV producers to curtail their use, news departments still expend great effort to place their correspondent on camera for a few seconds at the scene of a story.

Is all this effort perhaps wasted on a cynical TV audience? Maybe.

Economics correspondent Irving R. Levine, who has braved Washington rush-hour traffic, inclement weather and noisy jets to tape scores of standuppers outside the White House, Treasury and Capitol, for the NBC Nightly News, reports that viewers often ask him if he really stands in front of those landmarks or are they just a studio backdrop! Winds: 86 mph; air temperature: -15°F; water temperature: 28.6°F. Ah, a perfect day for iceberg climbing. And that's a good day in Antarctica, as Rick Ridgeway, Mike Graber, Beverly Johnson and Mike Hoover found out in a 30-day expedition there for ABC's The American Sportsman (Saturday, March 29). That's Graber at the peak and Ridgeway midway down, practicing their ice-climbing techniques for the arduous journey inland to the Forbidden Plateau, one of the least explored regions on Earth. Look closely: they aren't wearing life preservers. No need: anyone who fell into the icy waters would die of exposure in a few minutes. So dangerous was the expedition that the foursome, experienced mountaineers all, could find no scientific organization willing to sponsor their trip. But judging from the success of this adventure, next time—at least financially—they won't be left out in the cold.

Old pro Norman Fell can supply, on demand, a repertoire of emotions

By Bill Davidson

Although he sometimes describes himself as "just another pretty face," Norman Fell, the grizzled, lugubrious-visaged star of ABC's The Ropers, stands as a shining beacon to those of us who do not exactly qualify as male sex symbols. Did Fred Silverman —when he still was at ABC—ever offer what amounts to a no-cut contract to Robert Redford, Ryan O'Neal, Burt Reynolds? No. But that's exactly what beat-up, 55-year-old Norman Fell got.

It constituted an astounding triumph for the uglies of the world—coming → as it did from Silverman, the glamour-minded King of Jiggles on the female side. Here's how it happened:

In May 1977, Fell was glumly sitting with his wife, Karen, at ABC's annual promotional dinner for its affiliate stations at the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles. He was attending the prestigious banquet as co-Second Banana (along with Audra Lindley) of Three's Company, which had made its debut on the network only two months before but already was a confirmed hit series. There was much doting on stars John Ritter, Suzanne Somers and Joyce DeWitt, but Fell (playing the trio's cantankerous landlord, Stanley Roper) was largely ignored.

Suddenly, however, the veteran actor was surrounded by brass. Not just your ordinary senior-vice-president-in-charge-of-type brass, either. There was Silverman, then president of ABC's Entertainment Division; his boss, ABC Television president Frederick Pierce; and Pierce's boss, president and chief operating officer of ABC, Inc., Elton Rule. Before the befuddled Fell finished shaking hands, Silverman said, "Norman, we want to spin you off into a new show called The Ropers." Fell's befuddlement abruptly dissipated. "I don't want to do it," he said with rigid finality. Now it was Silverman's turn to be astonished. "Why not?" he demanded.

"Because," said Fell, "it took me long enough to get into a hit series. Now you want to put me in something else. So then we do 13 weeks and get canceled, and I end up with nothing."

"Oh," said Silverman and the ABC brass phalanx moved off to another table.

Fell promptly forgot about the encounter, since, as he told me later, "I hadn't even been the first choice for Stanley Roper when the original Three's Company pilot was made, so I couldn't believe I really was that much in demand."

Unbeknownst to Fell, however, Silverman persisted—behind the scenes. He had continuing conversations with producer Ted Bergmann, who had imported Three's Company from England, where it was known as Man About the House. Both Silverman and Bergmann knew that Man About the House had spun off its squabbling landlords—also known as the Ropers—into an even more successful British comedy, George and Mildred, played by top English comics Brian Murphy and Yootha Joyce. (Man About the House is gone but George and Mildred is entering its fourth year as one of the highest-ranking shows in what is left of the British Empire.)

Finally, Silverman said to Bergmann, "What do we have to do to get Norman Fell and Audra Lindley to switch over to the American version of George and Mildred?" As Bergmann recalls the ensuing dialogue, "I told Fred that Audra was no problem, but that Norman's paranoia could be assuaged if we offered both of them more money for Three's Company for the time being, plus an unprecedented agreement that they could return to Three's Company if The Ropers failed. Silverman said, 'Good thinking.' And that was it."

So Fell's forebodings were negated with the show-business equivalent of the pro-athlete's no-cut contract, and Silverman shortly thereafter departed for NBC, leaving ABC with the legacy of still another Silverman-induced successful situation comedy (so far, at least) in The Ropers.

This odd sequence of events highlights what had been—until then—a career that gave no indication that Fell would ever emerge as a full-fledged star of anything, let alone a comedy series that shows promise of being able to compete with the Morks and Lavernes and other adolescentia.

by face but seldom by name. You've seen him in hundreds of TV shows and dozens of movies, playing cops, mobsters, taxi drivers, escaped convicts, sidekicks. He was a favorite of many directors and worked all the time. Yet even after his sterling performances as the fight manager in Rich Man, Poor Man—Book I and as Alex Haley's agent in Roots: The Next Generations, he counted himself fortunate if people would merely confuse him with his fellow Philadelphian, Jack Klugman.

Although Fell's life and Klugman's are similar, Klugman emerged much earlier from character-actor obscurity with The Odd Couple and Quincy. "It probably took me longer," says Fell, "because I have less hair and I'm a little more handsome."

Actually, while Klugman went directly into acting from his drama training at Carnegie Tech, Fell encountered several detours both before and after a similar theater-arts undergraduate career at closer-to-home Temple University.

"At first," relates Fell, "I was destined to become a third-generation restaurateur." His family owned Fell's Restaurant, a famous dairy eatery in what is now the Society Hill section near the Philadelphia waterfront, and he lived in an apartment above the restaurant with his parents and two sisters. He says, "My entire life was directed toward the day when I would take over the making and serving of blintzes downstairs."

But then World War II came along and Norman, at 17, found himself dodging flak as a radio operator-aerial gunner in Army Air Corps B-25s in the South Pacific. Later he flew cargo in C-46s all over the South Pacific "except that now I was getting shot at for 8000 pounds of toilet paper."

Having survived the war, Fell gave up all thoughts of blintz-purveying, an occupation sometimes as harrowing as combat, and he went to Temple University on the GI Bill for four years of peaceful study of the drama under the illustrious Paul Randall. But, unlike Klugman, he still was not infected by the acting virus. He worked as a statistician for the Veterans Administration, and only when he found the job to be "a trap" did he finally move to New York to take his chances on becoming an actor. To support himself, he worked in the post office and also delivered photo supplies while taking courses under Stella Adler, the truly stellar acting coach of Marlon Brando, among others. It was Brando who recommended Fell to Miss Adler.

With a sense of appreciation that is rare in show business, Fell says, "I owe everything to that wonderful lady. She taught me that an actor's like a butcher. You don't waste a lot of time theorizing. You just roll up your sleeves and cut meat. For example, 'There are six ways to cry. OK, give me number three'."

To the chagrin of the more esoteric Actors Studio-type theorizers of that day, Fell almost immediately became a successful meat-cutter in the live-TV era of the 1950s. He did more than 200 plays for such shows as Studio One and Philco Playhouse, working with other then-neophytes like Judy Holliday, Sidney Poitier and Walter Matthau. He was versatile enough to play sad parts, funny parts, tough-guy parts. Paddy Chayefsky could not resist using him as one of the most vociferous of the jurors in his TV classic, "12 Angry Men."

Concurrent with his live-TV acting, Fell also did summer stock, which led to his first Broadway hit play, "Uncle Willie," in which he got the chief supporting role because the original actor chosen for the part towered distressingly over the tiny star, Menasha Skulnik. The too-tall actor was Harvey Korman.

Edward G. Robinson's son-in-law in the national company of "Middle of the Night," which brought him to Los Angeles on tour. He was seen there by movie director Lewis Milestone, who took one look at Fell's basset-sad countenance and cast him as Gregory Peck's laconic radio operator in the 1959 Korean War film "Pork Chop Hill."

That led to Fell's lengthy career as the favorite character actor of a distinguished succession of movie directors. Milestone used him in "Ocean's 11" and "PT 109." Then, while filming a 1961 NBC television series, 87th Precinct (he played the sorrowful and hypochondriacal Jewish cop, Meyer Meyer), he was spotted by Stanley Kramer, who cast him in his "Inherit the Wind" and "It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World." The latter brought him to the attention of Mike Nichols, and for a while Fell was a supporting player in all Nichols' films, including "The Graduate" and "Catch-22." It was the same with director Don Siegel, for whom Fell began as one of the ruthless hit-men in Ernest Hemingway's "The Killers."

So Fell was working steadily and profitably. But was he happy? No. He had been through two unsuccessful marriages and two other short-lived TV series, Dan August and Needles and Pins.

But then two things happened to bring fleeting smiles to that dour face. First, he met and married his current wife, Karen, a geriatric nurse who is now a guidance counselor. Next came the decision of Ted Bergmann and his fellow producers on the incipient series Three's Company to substitute Fell for the actor they originally had cast as Stanley Roper.

"I didn't really like the part," says Fell. "I didn't see how Audra Lindley and I could sustain a one-joke relationship based on our sexual incompatability and my impotence. But that shows you how much I know. For insurance, I also did another pilot, Richie Brockelman, Private Eye, at about the same time—and where is Richie Brockelman today?"

With the spin-off of The Ropers (which, incidentally, made its debut last March with a 55 per-cent audience share, the second-highest series-premiere rating in history), Fell is more sanguine about the Stanley Roper role. He told me, "I love Roper now because he's a complete ass. I've come to realize that he's a lot like Archie Bunker. But also he's a small man, a vulnerable human being, consistently at the bottom rung of the ladder—and like Charlie Chaplin's tramp, occasionally kicking the rich man in the pants. I think audiences like him because they can say, 'Here's a guy who's lower than we are'."

It wasn't convincing. Looking around the magnificent Pacific Palisades house where Norman and Karen live with her two children and occasionally two of his (all from their previous marriages), I asked, "What's the real reason you're doing a fragile sitcom like The Ropers when you've earned all this from steady distinguished acting?"

"OK, you've got me," Fell admitted. "I have an intellect, which, granted, I'm not using as Roper. What I want is to go into a higher gear that utilizes all my horsepower. There are really important pictures I could have done, like 'The Godfather' and 'Queen of the Stardust Ballroom.' Guys like me fall in love; guys like me could play poets; but as nicely as I was doing before, I never could afford to hold out for the right script for me and the right director for me. And that's why I finally decided to do The Ropers. With all that loot from a nice, long-running hit series. . . ."

He didn't have to finish the sentence. Fell was referring to what might politely be termed "the-hell-with-you-money." And that's a real reason. (END)

NBC Goes Undercover To Video Tape FBI 'Sting' Operation

Washington—Some of the members of Congress and others allegedly caught by the FBI's Abscam "Sting" operation had no idea they were being video taped as they talked to a "wealthy Arab" inside a fashionable townhouse here. It may also be surmised that the FBI had no idea that its own highly classified criminal investigation was, in turn, being video taped by NBC News crews concealed in undercover Winnebago vans parked on nearby streets.

When the story broke, NBC had a clear lead on its chief competitors, CBS and ABC. The reason is that NBC News correspondent Brian Ross and producer Ira Silverman had unearthed the Abscam plot more than two months before and had dug up not only the address of the house being used as a front by the FBI in Washington, but also the names of the probable subjects of any Government inquiry.

So, as the story heated up, Washington bureau chief Sid Davis quietly called in more than half a dozen of his correspondents and producers, and had a pair of camera crews flown in from Miami and Pittsburgh. He used the extra people to stake out the homes of seven congressmen, Rep. John Murphy (D-N.Y.), Rep. Frank Thompson (D-N.J.), Rep. John W. Jenrette Jr. (D-S.C.), Rep. Richard Kelly (R-Fla.), and Reps. John P. Murtha, Michael Myers and Raymond F. Lederer (all D-Pa.) as well as Sen. Harrison A. Williams (D-N.J.), names gathered in the Ross-Silverman investigation. Says Davis: "We wanted our people at the targets' houses when the FBI went to notify them."

The network had also parked a pair of campers outside the FBI's Abscam house at 4407 W Street, N.W., in a fashionable Washington neighborhood. Inside the campers were camera crews, an NBC artist and a pair of special "Owl Eye" night-vision lenses that magnify light up to 30,000 times. These helped capture footage of evening visitors to the home.

Davis says that "lots of news organizations—including ABC—called us to find out the address of the FBI's front house. We didn't tell them anything." He was especially pleased by ABC's call because the house next door to the FBI house is owned by former ABC correspondent Margaret Osmer. The FBI house itself was leased from a Washington Post reporter who knew nothing about his tenants' true occupations.

It is reported that Davis is less pleased that the Department of Justice is furious that NBC (as well as The New York Times and Newsday) had excellent sources inside the FBI investigation. "We have a strong ethics policy. We don't reveal sources," says Davis.

The FBI investigation was discovered more than two months ago by Ross and Silverman, according to NBC sources. The pair have become known as "Batman and Robin" because of their hard-hitting investigative pieces on such subjects as the Teamsters, Mafia infiltration of Hollywood and organized crime. —John Weisman

As We See It

☐ The Peter D. Hart Research Associates, a Washington fact-finding organization, was recently commissioned by the Public Broadcasting Service to survey a carefully selected cross section of the public.

The researchers put their questions to each of 1845 adults for an average of 55 minutes in their own homes, located in Minnesota, New York and Florida.

☐ Asked about their various relaxation activities, the respondents collectively named more than 50 types, and—as might have been expected—television-viewing ranked highest on the list as the relaxation activity most often engaged in.

But when it came to the degree of satisfaction provided to viewers as against their other forms of recreational activity, current TV was rated near the bottom.

☐ One of the more interesting questions put to the respondents was: "Do the people who run commercial television have my best interests at heart?" To this, 67 per cent said, "No." Asked the same question about PBS, some 60 per cent of the surveyed group replied, "Yes."

These attitudes, strangely, are in sharp contrast to A.C. Nielsen Company data for a week in March 1979, which showed that of all the time spent by all Americans watching all television, 97 per cent is devoted to watching commercial television, and the remaining 3 per cent goes to watching the noncommercial PBS stations.

☐ The mood must have been bittersweet when the findings of Hart's survey were plumped down on the desk of PBS's leader. Gazing at the portrait on his wall—of The Great American Viewer—he may have thought: "You say you believe we have your best interests at heart—and the other guys aren't as much fun as they used to be. So tell me something: Why can't you spend 4 per cent of your time, or maybe even 5, with us?"

participation in the 1980 Summer Olympic Games is very iffy these days, NBC is still prepared to pay the Moscow Organizing Committee more than $11 million between now and the end of August. Since the U.S. does not have to withdraw its name from Olympic competition until eight weeks before the start of the Games on July 19, NBC is expected to deposit its next payment of $6 million in account No. 70102378 of the Moscow branch of the Bank for Foreign Trade of the USSR. Two other NBC payments, of $3.6 million and $2 million, are due the Soviets in August if NBC carries the Summer Games and the American team participates.

Meanwhile, the West German entrepreneur who was responsible for the network's successful $87-million Olympics bid is still also receiving NBC cash. Lothar Bock has already been paid more than $1 million for acting as NBC's go-between. The network also agreed at the time to pay him $400,000 in additional fees and, as well, buy 15 Bock-produced shows between 1977 and 1981. But NBC found Bock's talent as a producer somewhat lacking, and late in 1978 his contracts were renegotiated and an American producer, the Cates Company, was hired to produce the Russian specials. None of them have been televised. —J.W.

Hollywood—NBC's long-running daytime versions of The Hollywood Squares and High Rollers are expected to be canceled in a drastic shakeup of the network's morning lineup. Three other series likely to be affected by the housecleaning are Wheel of Fortune, Chain Reaction and Password Plus. Four morning time slots now occupied by game shows will be taken over by The David Letterman Show (10-11:30 A.M., ET) and Today at Midday (11:30-noon). The Letterman show starts in June, while Midday begins in August.

The Screening Room

Previews of noteworthy series and specials by TV GUIDE programming editors. For movie choices, see 'This Week's Movies,' by Judith Crist, in this section.

Moving into their second week, the Lake Placid Olympics face some stiff competition—from Goldie Hawn and Liza Minnelli, Bob Newhart and Luciano Pavarotti. (Olympic coverage is detailed in the special Winter Olympics Guide.)

SATURDAY. One of the later (and perhaps lesser known) works in the Verdi canon, "Un Ballo in Maschera" boasts one of the composer's most richly melodic and dramatically integrated scores. Interpreting it Live from the Met (8 PBS; taped in some areas) is a distinguished cast headed by Luciano Pavarotti and Katia Ricciarelli.

MONDAY. An amusing Little House on the Prairie (8 NBC) spotlights the bickering Olesons. Henpecked Nels (Richard Bull), finally fed up with his cluck of a wife (Katherine MacGregor), flies the coop—and finds an alluring chick (Suzanne Rogers) in another town . . . James Thurber's "The Greatest Man in the World" is a 1930s aviation hero named Jack Smurch. But Smurch, unfortunately, is also "a congenital hooligan mentally and morally unequipped to cope with his prodigious fame." A delightful adaptation of this American Short Story (9 PBS) features Brad Davis as the uncouth air ace, and Howard da Silva and John McMartin as newspapermen determined to spare their readers the truth about Jack's pitiful personality . . . "Dreaming men," wrote Stephen Vincent Benet, "are haunted men." And that is indeed the case for the overworked doctors and nurses of the 4077th M*A*S*H (9 CBS), who find that even sleep cannot respite the horrors of war.

TUESDAY. That wry and rumpled barrister, "Rumpole of the Bailey," is up to his wig in woman trouble in an engaging Mystery! (9 PBS). Not only must Rumpole (Leo McKern) contend with two jealous wives (one of them his own), but also with an overeager female assistant and an overbearing lady judge. Still, there's a surprise twist to this tale that should leave both sexes smiling . . . Goldie and Liza Together (9 CBS) teams Misses Hawn and Minnelli for a stylish variety hour produced by Real People and Laugh-In creator George Schlatter. Sure, there are laughs here, but they're interwoven into some razzle-dazzle production numbers—and interrupted for a dramatic break: an original sketch that gives the stars a chance to show the subtlety and sensitivity that has earned each an Oscar . . . Bob Newhart started out as an accountant, but he admits that the debits and credits were never his forte. ("I always figured that if you came within six or eight bucks, you were going to be OK.") The business world's loss is entertainment's gain, as Newhart proves once again in a comedy hour (10 CBS) that focuses his droll style and split-second timing on spoofs of today's hangups and hassles—among which, appropriately, is inflation.

In some areas network shows may not be seen on the days and times indicated. Times are Eastern.

LIVE—FROM THE BATTLEFIELD

Live coverage of battles may indeed be technically feasible in time for the next American war, but it would not be at all moral ["Watch Your Loved One Brave Bombs and Bullets," Jan. 26]. Would you like to identify that injured young soldier as your grandson, husband, son or daughter? No, you would not. The trauma of that scene, in vivid color and clear focus, would affect you irrevocably. War is news, and should be covered, but the line should be drawn to exclude the kind of live battleground coverage your article described. As an active member of the U.S. Army, I may be called upon to be an unwilling character in that real-life, front-line drama, and I just might act as an editor, laying a few well-placed .45 slugs right into that minicam.

KEEPING 'QUINCY' COOL

I am grateful for the very interesting and satisfying article by Bill O'Hallaren about Robert Ito ["Rubbing 'Quincy' the Right Way," Jan. 19]. This article reveals Robert Ito to be the kind of man I have felt he actually is: kind, gentle, very intelligent and happy in the likable role he portrays in the fine Quincy show.

Alice Green

Asian-Americans are in positions of authority and responsibility; however, on TV, this race is not portrayed similarly. For example, three per cent of the Senate is Asian-American, but TV always portrays the senators from the represented states as Caucasian; the governor of Hawaii is George Ariyoshi, an Asian-American, but CBS employs a Caucasian to play his role on Hawaii Five-O; a significant number of the doctors in the L.A. Medical Examiners Office are Asian-Americans, as is the L.A. medical examiner Dr. Thomas Noguchi, but NBC employs only Caucasians to play these doctors on Quincy. One Asian-American is employed to play—a lab technician! To his credit Robert Ito has brought authority to that role that is NBC's token job for an Asian-American actor.

OLYMPIC BOYCOTT

To your editorial "As We See It" ["Moscow Is No Place for the Olympic Games," Jan. 26] on the advisability of moving the 1980 Summer Olympics out of Moscow, I offer you a most heartfelt bravo! It is true that I would like to see sports and politics separated, but it is also true that that day is very far off indeed. You did, however, miss one point that deserves to be considered, not only to support moving the Olympic Games elsewhere, but to question the participation of the USSR in future games as well. In that country, children are placed, as soon as their athletic abilities are determined, in state-run institutions, where they are fed, clothed and sheltered at the expense of the state while they receive a most rigorous training in their athletic specialties. I consider it one more among the many Soviet hypocrisies that these youngsters are entered as "amateur" athletes to compete against Free World youngsters who themselves as well as their families have to sacrifice on all levels in order to acquire the proficiency needed to excel.

William F. Maisannes
Fairfield, Conn.

I read the "As We See It" column today and I wholeheartedly agree. The Soviet Union does not separate politics from sports, the arts or any other facet of their life. We are hit with their propaganda at every turn. To boycott the Olympic Games would show the Soviet Union and the world that we are a nation founded on human rights. We practice human rights in this country and we believe in them.

This Week's Movies By Judith Crist

Saturday, CBS	Citizens Band
Sunday, NBC	The Towering Inferno (Part I)
Monday, NBC	The Towering Inferno (Conclusion)
Tuesday, NBC	The End
Wednesday, CBS	Escape
Friday, NBC	Detour to Terror

With a trio of prime-time goodies for grown-ups, this network-movie week runs the quality gamut, reaching the pits for the stay-ups.

One of the goodies—and I hasten to note that it's not for the sensitive where death and suicide are concerned—is 1978's The End, a black and slightly blue comedy about living with dying. And a very funny comedy it is, in sophisticated slapstick terms. A high-risk project, Jerry Belson's irreverent story of a dying man comes to the screen under the auspices of Burt Reynolds as co-producer, director and star. Reynolds plays no slick "good ol' boy" in this one; he's an average and not particularly admirable man who's mucked up his life in ordinary fashion and who is suddenly brought face to face with his mortality. What he thought was "a new way of losing weight—throwing up" has turned out to be a toxic blood disease that gives him three months to a year to live. "I haven't had much dignity in my life, but I'm going to have dignity in my death," our hero announces—and proceeds on the instant to go to self-pitying pieces. What ensues ranges from the satiric to the sensitive to the slapstick. Reynolds retains a careful Everyman stance amid the characters who swirl around him: Joanne Woodward as his liberated ex-wife; Sally Field as his self-centered lover; Kristy McNichol as his beloved daughter; Myrna Loy and Pat O'Brien as his aged parents are all fine—and finest of all is Dom DeLuise as a moon-faced murderer. Tidied up for telecasting, the comedy is adult in its frank approach to cutting down our hypocritical hangups with wit and laughter and even a touch of feeling.

The other goodie, with far broader appeal, is a 1977 sleeper, Citizens Band (briefly known as "Handle with Care"). An adult "American Graffiti," this Jonathan Demme film, with screenplay by Paul Brickman, is a delightful collection of character sketches, with an engaging variety of folk affected and linked by their various uses of the two-way technology of CB radios. The focal character is Paul Le Mat, who takes his CB seriously. Then there's Candy Clark, who takes it sexily; Alix Elias, who takes it commercially, and, most memorably, Charles Napier, a trucker whose "Captain's Paradise" involves Ann Wedgeworth and Marcia Rodd. It's all good fun.

For slick but satisfying entertainment, there's Detour to Terror, the second TV-movie with O.J. Simpson as executive producer and star. With a teleplay by Sydney A. Glass and Mark Rodgers directed by Michael O'Herlihy, Simpson stars as the driver of a tour bus headed from Albuquerque, N.M., for a Las Vegas gambling weekend. There are fewer stereotypes than usual among the passengers and suspense galore as the plot involves hijacking, kidnaping and three weirdos in dune buggies stranding the group in the desert. There are dandy chases and motor duels between the buggies

LEADING ENTRANTS AT PRESS TIME

Alpine Skiing: Sweden's Ingemar Stenmark, the 1976 bronze medalist, has won 14 consecutive giant-slalom races in World Cup competition—an unprecedented feat, which has made him the heavy favorite in that event. Stenmark is considered more beatable in the slalom, in which Peter Popangelov of Bulgaria and Andreas Wenzel of Liechtenstein have each posted a win on the current World Cup circuit. (Stenmark has five.)

The women's downhill looms as a showdown between Marie-Theres Nadig and Annemarie Moser-Proell. Nadig, from Switzerland, has clinched the 1980 World Cup downhill crown, winning six of seven starts. She also won the gold medal in this event at the 1972 Games in Sapporo, Japan. Moser-Proell, an Austrian, has one first and three seconds in World Cup downhill competition this season. More importantly, she won the downhill event held at Lake Placid last March. In the giant slalom, Hanni Wenzel of Liechtenstein, who has triumphed in four of five World Cup races this season, is the top-rated entrant.

Figure Skating: Charles Tickner of the U.S., the 1978 world champion; Vladimir Kovalev of the USSR, who won that crown in 1977 and '79; and Robin Cousins of Great Britain, the reigning European titleholder, should vie for top honors in the men's competition.

Linda Fratianne of the U.S., the 1977 and '79 world champion; and Anett Poetzsch of East Germany, the current European titlist, are the leading contenders in the ladies' event.

In the pairs competition, the Soviet team of Irina Rodnina and Aleksandr Zaitsev, the six-time world champions, face a challenge from Tai Babilonia and Randy Gardner of the U.S., who won the '79 world title when Rodnina and Zaitsev took the year off to have a child.

Ice Hockey: The Soviets and the Czechs, who finished one-two at the 1976 Games, are the favorites. The U.S.'s medal hopes rest squarely on the shoulders—and quick reflexes—of goalie Jim Craig, who was in the nets when the U.S. tied Czechoslovakia 2-2 at the 1979 World Championships.

Miniature of the Famous 1907 United States Saint-Gaudens $20 GOLD PIECE

Only $10 - if you act within 30 days!

In June, 1979, a rare Saint-Gaudens $20 gold piece brought the highest price ever paid for a gold coin at a public auction — $225,000! This exquisitely detailed miniature is an authentic replica of this historic coin, reproducing every detail — even the tiny wing feathers on the eagle and the unique Roman numeral MCMVII date.

Exclusive Limited Offer by The Westport Mint

The 1907 Saint-Gaudens miniature is accompanied by a Certificate of Authenticity, which we advise keeping in a safe place for use at some future date if you or your heirs might decide to sell it.

Price Guaranteed Only 30 Days

The price is guaranteed only for 30 days, since the world price of gold recently rose to a record high of over $400 per ounce. There is a strict order limit of five, and you are protected by an unconditional money-back guarantee — if after inspection you decide not to keep your gold pieces, you may return them within 30 days for a full refund, less postage, handling, and insurance charges. So to avoid disappointment, we suggest you act quickly!

THE TOWERING INFERNO, PART 1

Producer Irwin Allen's most successful disaster movie remains this all-star thriller about a blaze that breaks out in the world's tallest building.

As fate—and Allen—would have it, most of the fire's unsuspecting victims are guests at a party in the penthouse of the fictitious Glass Tower, a just-completed 138-story edifice soaring above the San Francisco skyline.

Among those in imminent peril are the Tower's idealistic architect (Paul Newman) and his fiancee (Faye Dunaway); the cost-cutting builder (William Holden), his daughter (Susan Blakely) and son-in-law (Richard Chamberlain); the security chief (O.J. Simpson), the publicist (Robert Wagner) and his secretary (Susan Flannery); a con artist (Fred Astaire) and his wealthy mark (Jennifer Jones); a senator (Robert Vaughn); and—trying to save them all—a heroic fire chief (Steve McQueen).

What saves this contrived plot is the action—enhanced by some genuinely thrilling stuntwork and spectacular special effects. This 1974 box-office hit earned Oscars for editing, cinematography and best original song, "We May Never Love like This Again." (2 hrs.)

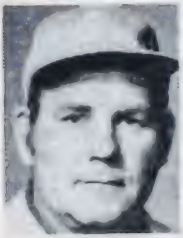
Lady Plugs In Saves Time,

By Jack T. Johnson,
Agronomist

Every year I see people pour more and more money into their lawns. They dig, fertilize and lime. They rake it all in. They scatter their seed and roll and water it.

Birds love it! Seeds which aren't washed away by rain give them a feast. But some seed grows, and soon it's time to weed, water and mow, mow... until summer comes to burn the lawn into hay, or crabgrass and diseases infest it.



That's what happens to ordinary grass, but not to Amazoy Zoysia.

"MOWED IT 2 TIMES" WRITES WOMAN

For example, Mrs. M. R. Mitter writes me how her lawn "...is the envy of all who see it. When everybody's lawns around here are brown from drought ours just stays as green as ever. I've never watered it, only when I put the plugs in ...Last summer we had it mowed (2) times. Another thing, we never have to pull any weeds—it's just wonderful!"

And from Iowa came word that the state's largest Men's Garden Club picked a Zoysia lawn as the "top lawn—nearly perfect" in its area. Yet this lawn had been watered only once all summer up to August!

Your Own Supply of Plug Transplants

Established Amazoy gives you Zoysia plugs to plant in other areas as desired!

DON'T BE MISLED! THERE IS ONLY ONE AMAZOY

Amazoy plugs are taken from genuine Meyer Z-52 Zoysia... guaranteed winter-hardened for 3 full years under the supervision of trained agronomists. Over a HALF-BILLION plugs sold! So don't take chances with inferior plugs. Accept No Substitute for Amazoy Zoysia! If it isn't Amazoy, you're not getting the plugs that made Zoysia famous.

CHOKES OUT CRABGRASS

Thick, rich, luxurious, established Amazoy grows into a carpet of grass that chokes out crabgrass and weeds all summer long whether planted part-shade or full sun. It will NOT winter kill. Goes off its green color after killing frosts. Begins regaining its green color at the time when the temperature in the spring is consistently warm. This, of course, varies with climate.

For Slopes, Play Areas, Bare Spots

End erosion of slopes with Amazoy. Perfect answer for hard-to-cover spots, play-worn areas.

NO NEED TO RIP OUT PRESENT GRASS

PLUG AMAZOY INTO OLD LAWN, NEW GROUND OR NURSERY AREA.

Just set Amazoy plugs into holes in ground like a cork in a bottle. Plant 1 foot apart, checkerboard style.

When planted in existing lawn areas plugs will spread to drive out old, unwanted growth, including weeds—from part shade to full sun. Easy planting instructions with order.

ORDER NOW

Amazoy is the Trade Mark Registered U.S. Patent Office for our Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass.

PATENTED STEP-ON PLUGGER IS... FREE WITH ORDERS OF 600 PLUGS OR MORE

Amazoy exclusive! No one else can offer you this patented 2-way plugger. Saves bending, time, work. Light, rugged, invaluable for transplanting. Cuts away competing growth as it digs plug holes.

WEAR RESISTANT

When America's largest University tested 13 leading grasses for wear resistance, such as foot scuffling, the Zoysia (matrella and japonica Meyer Z-52) led all others.

Your Amazoy lawn takes such wear as cookouts, lawn parties, lawn furniture, etc. Grows so thick you could play football on it and not get your feet muddy. Even if children play on it, they won't hurt it—or themselves.

Cuts Your Work, Saves You Money

Your deep-rooted, established Amazoy lawn saves you time and money in many ways. It never needs replacement... ends re-seeding forever. Fertilizing and watering (water costs money, too) are rarely if ever needed. It ends the need for crabgrass killers permanently. It cuts pushing a noisy mower in the blistering sun by two thirds.

NO SEED, NO SOD!

There's no seed that produces winter-hardy Meyer Zoysia. Sod of ordinary grass brings with it the problems of seed, like weeds, diseases, burning out, other ills.

Zoysia Farm Nurseries, 110 Painters Mill Rd. Owings Mills, Md. 21117

Meyer Z-52 Zoysia grass was perfected by U.S. Gov't., released in cooperation with U.S. Golf Assoc. as a superior grass.

Order guaranteed Amazoy now, get your bonus plugs FREE. Your order will be delivered at earliest correct time for planting in your area.

We ship all orders the same day grass is taken from the soil, shipping/handling charge collect via most economical means.

THE GREATEST MAN IN THE WORLD

The Twenties had "lucky Lindy." The Thirties—unluckily—have a new aviation hero: Jack Smurch (Brad Davis) who somehow manages, while energized by a gallon of gin and a six-pound salami, to pilot his sorry excuse for a plane on the first solo flight nonstop around the world.

Smurch has an adoring public and a girl friend (Carol Kane), but to really know him is to loathe him. His former high-school principal recalls being knifed by him ("Jack had strong opinions"), and Jack's mother (Sudie Bond) wouldn't have been sorry to see her son make an unscheduled landing in the Atlantic.

Smurch's crude manner and grimy appearance are just not the stuff of national heroes. Consequently, an editor (Howard da Silva), reporter (John McMartin) and the Secretary of State (William Prince) feel they're better left unrevealed to Jack's millions of fans.

Directed by Ralph Rosenblum; Jeff Wanshel adapted this James Thurber story. Smidgeon: Reed Birney. Dr. Gresham: Russell Horton. Jake: Roy Poole. Thaddeus: Ron Weyand. Irish Nurse: Alma Cuervo. Henry Fonda is the series host. (60 min.)

THE END

Burt Reynolds directed and stars in this dark farce about a dying man.

Real-estate salesman Wendell "Sonny" Lawson (Reynolds) knows the end is near when his doctor tells him that he has a fatal blood disease—"the same thing Ali MacGraw had in 'Love Story'"—and gives him three months to live.

Sonny takes it hard. First, he cries—so loudly that he empties a crowded elevator. Next, he tries to break the bad news to his ex-wife (Joanne Woodward), mistress (Sally Field), daughter (Kristy McNichol) and parents (Myrna Loy, Pat O'Brien)—and seeks solace from a "death therapist" (Carl Reiner) and a teen-age priest (Robby Benson).

Determined to "die with dignity," yet failing at suicide, Sonny enlists the aid of a sweetly deranged mental patient named Marlon Borunki (Dom DeLuise). Their inspired lunacy transforms this 1977 film from a sour satire on death into a bittersweet lesson in living. (2 hrs.)

GOLDIE AND LIZA TOGETHER
9 PM (9) (11) (27)

Goldie Hawn and Liza Minnelli

TO MUSIC, COMEDY AND DANCE, ADD A LITTLE DRAMA

Special: A showcase for Goldie Hawn and Liza Minnelli, who sing and swing and even act.

But first their talents are displayed in three imaginatively choreographed production numbers. Goldie camps it up to "Y.M.C.A." with body builders and gymnasts; Liza brings out all the sultriness of "Bad Girls"; and together they clown around in motley costumes to a playful version of "One Step."

Turning serious, the headliners team for a poignant rendition of "The Other Woman"; and, in a nonmusical change of pace written by Fred Ebb (the lyricist for "Cabaret" as well as Liza's Broadway debut in 1965's "Flora, the Red Menace"), portray two New York City roommates facing a turning point in their lives.

In the finale, Goldie and Liza (costumed as flappers) frolic to "It's What You Can," high-step to the Charleston beat of "All that Jazz," and salute each other with "Together, Wherever We Go." (60 min.)

BOB NEWHART
10 PM (9) (11) (27)

PUNGENT WIT, SHARP SATIRE

Special: Spoofs of modern life are acted out by Bob Newhart and a comedy company.

Inflation takes a ribbing in Bob's stroll-cum-monologue through a supermarket; and in a knock at the high cost of dining out that casts Newhart as a maitre d' catering to shocked customers Robert Ridgely and Joan Van Ark. ("Wine? I have a good fifty-one. That's not the year, that's the price.")

Television is the target of two other sendups. In one, a pair of TV addicts (Marian Mercer, Bob) try to talk to each other when the set fizzles. In the other, a "happy-news" team laugh their way through terrorist bulletins, crime stories—and the weather, reported by "the minority weatherwoman of the week" (played by LaWanda Page).

And then there's fear of flying—which isn't calmed by Newhart's impersonation of an air-traffic controller. "You guys on the ground," he polls a takeoff-waiting line, "who wants to go up next?" And to a pilot who can't find Salt Lake City, he advises "you can't miss it. It's got mountains and a great big tabernacle." (60 min.)

The $15-a-month inflation fighter.

It's the additional life insurance coverage you need today to help your family cope with tomorrow. After all, the dollar that bought 100 cents of goods and services in 1967 now buys only 59 cents worth. And, in spite of inflation's toll, your family has likely grown accustomed to a higher standard of living. It's this combination of circumstances that makes planning for your family's financial future vital.

Now here's how you can.

THE INFLATION FIGHTER $50,000 Five Year Renewable Term Policy
Age	Annual Cost*	Monthly Cost*
25	$168.00	$14.00
30	180.00	15.00
35	210.00	17.50
40	294.00	24.50
45	420.00	35.00

*Based on premium payment by monthly bank mode.

The average family should be protected by the equivalent of four to five years' income. For example, if you earn $15,000 a year, your life insurance coverage should be at least four times that, or $60,000.

If you're like many people with a $10,000 policy, you've let inflation get ahead of you by at least $50,000. And that's where our surprisingly affordable inflation fighter comes in. A $50,000 Life of Georgia five-year renewable executive term policy will cost a 30-year-old male just $180.00 a year. That's $15.00 a month to fight the battle against inflation.

Just mail the coupon, and one of our agents will phone to arrange an appointment for evaluating and updating your family's coverage. He will also tell you how all or a part of this inflation fighter policy can be converted to permanent insurance as your needs change.

By return mail, we'll send you What My Family Should Know. It's a convenient, spiral-bound financial log for recording all your assets and obligations.

and the bus and the buggies and a motorcycle, and interesting interplay among the passengers, not all of whom are quite what they seem. Simpson is a bit on the superhero side—but how else would ordinary folk survive the terrible happenings on hand? Arte Johnson is very good as the cheery tour guide, with nice bits too from Randall Carver, Kathryn Holcomb, Tom Rosales, Gerald O'Loughlin et al.

A second new TV-movie was unavailable for preview. Based on the book written by Dwight and Barbara Worker, Escape stars Timothy Bottoms as a young man, jailed on a drug charge in a Mexican prison, who attempts to escape, with Kay Lenz the young woman who helps him.

The last and least of the prime-time newcomers is 1974's The Towering Inferno, pyromaniac's delight with the burning of a 138-story business-residential complex designed by architect Paul Newman, which Fire Chief Steve McQueen can't save. The moral of this sappiness seems to be that firemen, the salt of the earth, ought to design buildings because architects are megalomaniacs, contractors crooks and building codes antique. There are valid points buried in the rubble of this cardboard spectacular.

Rubbish is the word for the late-movie premiere, on NBC Sunday, of 1974's Welcome to Arrow Beach, briefly shown in theaters as "Tender Flesh." In this inept cheapie, the late Laurence Harvey, who also directed the film, played a Korean War veteran who developed a taste for human flesh at the front and indulged in cannibalism on the home front while living in incest with his sister (Joanna Pettet). The cannibalism and the incest have been cut for TV. Now Harvey just chops up wayfaring ladies, presumably for the fun of it. The fun is all his.

AIR FORCE

Actress meets trapeze artist and flips head over heels

Lee Meriwether may leave 'Barnaby Jones' for a new life with Tito Gaona

By Al & Joanne Martinez

Lee Meriwether was riding an elephant, and Tito Gaona was flipping around in the air 30 feet off the ground when she looked up and he looked down. It was what is known in television as a moment, a time of violin music and close-up shots, and what in real life is known as love. Their gazes met, however fleetingly, and now Lee wants to run away with the circus. Well, more specifically, with Tito. It could happen to anyone.

The occasion was a 1978 charity performance of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus, for which Tito performs as an aerialist. ("The best in the world," says Lee proudly.) She was on the elephant as her contribution to the charity effort, a kind of elegant mahout. As someone would remark later, it was evident from the start that mahout belonged to Tito.

Whether or not they met precisely that way (some pragmatists contend they merely met over coffee backstage among the zebras and the dancing bears), the result was significant for the former Miss America.

In order to marry Tito (they've announced their engagement) and travel with the circus, Meriwether is thinking of leaving the long-running →

CBS series Barnaby Jones, a drowsily low-key detective show, in which she plays Barnaby's (Buddy Ebsen's) daughter-in-law and assistant, Betty Jones.

She wants to devote time to her new production company, Four Reel, plus occasional movies and a permanent Tito. Episodic television gets in the way of all that. "Leaving Barnaby would not be an easy decision to make," she says, taking a break from filming on a sound stage at Hollywood's Samuel Goldwyn Studios. Moments earlier she had been playfully roughhousing with a member of the crew, and before that she had been showing family pictures to Ebsen.

"I've been with the show since the beginning, eight years, and we're a lovely family. But now there are other things in my life. There is a time to stay and a time to move on."

"Lee is above all things loyal," Mark Levin, her agent since 1960, observes. "If you doubt that, figure this: how many people in this business keep the same agent for 20 years?"

She's known around Barnaby as "Our Cheerleader," partly because she led the cheers (and bought the team shirts) for a studio softball game, but mostly because of her upbeat attitude on the set. She bounces from dressing room to set, gives a grip a playful punch in the stomach and hugs costar Mark Shera before taking her place in front of the cameras.

She is dressed in jeans, a loose blouse and sneakers, which do not for an instant detract from her patrician good looks. The years have been good to Lee Meriwether.

Executive producer Philip Saltzman praises her for never having thrown a tantrum and never having missed a filming date in the eight years of Barnaby. "That's nothing," says Levin. "When she was doing a series in the '60s, she was so pregnant she couldn't even sit down. We had to prop her up to rest. But she still didn't miss a show."

Lee is hoping that with her own production company she'll get a chance at playing comedy. "Surprised?" she asks over her shoulder, bouncing off to the set. "So are a lot of people until they see me do it. Then they say, 'Hey, you're really funny!'

"It's a question of preconceived notions. Back at the beginning, everyone had me figured as an empty-headed beauty queen who couldn't walk and talk at the same time, much less act." A director once wanted to deny her a role for just that reason, but agreed, at length, to let her read for the part. He ended up hiring her. "I've been a beauty-queen bigot!" he shouted. "She's perfect!"

Lee's desire to do comedy (she's done some spots on other shows) may not come to fruition, but if determination has anything to do with it, a writer has observed, "She'll end up being both Laverne and Shirley."

Los Angeles-born and Phoenix-raised, Lee was only 10 when she announced to her mother that she wanted to be an actress.

"I said that was just fine," Ethel Meriwether, now a good-humored 76, recalls. "But you can't always take those things too seriously, you know. At one time she said she wanted to be an Episcopalian nun."

Never in those earlier years, however, did she ever indicate a desire to run away with the circus. That came later, thanks to Tito, a charity performance and, in some measure, an annual special called "Circus of the Stars."

After meeting Tito at the charity performance, Lee came back with her daughter Lesley to see him again. And as they watched him gambol on the high wire, it became obvious that Tito was happy about that. Lesley poked her mother in the ribs and whispered, "He's looking at you, Mom."

Romance bloomed to such a degree that now Lee even works out with →

Tito's aerialist team. "I'm not good enough to be in the act as a regular," she says, "except maybe on a Saturday afternoon when everything is kind of laid-back. Never go to a circus on a Saturday afternoon."

Somewhat coincidental to her meeting Tito (destiny, if you prefer), "Circus of the Stars" asked Lee to perform. "Sure!" she replied brightly, not even certain what the program was. She thought they wanted her to do drama. It wasn't until later that she discovered they wanted her to walk the high wire.

It was before Tito's influence in her life and no one had ever told her what it took to do a high-wire act.

"The first time I was on the wire, I took one step and slipped," Lee says, remembering with a wince. "I hit the net feet-first and couldn't move for three days."

Miss Cheerleader, however, is not without grit. Still determined to be a part of the show, she switched to an act with actor Peter Fonda, who rode a motorcycle from the ground to a cable 30 feet up.

Lee's job was to swing back and forth under the moving motorcycle on a trap bar. In theory it worked fine, but halfway up, a safety harness unsnapped.

"I held on as hard as I could and kept trying to look graceful. All I could think of was what they'd told me in training: 'Pretty hands, pretty hands, point your toes . . .' "

Anyone else might have let the whole thing go at that. But not Lee. Asked twice more to appear on "Circus of the Stars," she not only did a high-wire act, but also was a "flyer" on the trapeze—one of those people who are flipped back and forth between strong men.

"I didn't fall those times," she adds unnecessarily. "Of course, by then I had the best help in the world. Tito."

Now she is content to let Tito do the circus performing for the most part, although content might not be the right word. "I get so nervous watching him," she says, "my hands are slippery with perspiration when I applaud. Maybe that's why I spend a lot of time backstage just sewing up tights and things."

Lee's two daughters from a previous marriage—Lesley, 16, and Kyle, 19—are both following in Mom's footsteps. Lesley is training with the circus and appeared in "Circus of the Stars" with Lee, and Kyle is studying acting and appeared in a Barnaby episode.

"Lee has always seen herself in the mother-role," says makeup man and longtime friend Scott Hamilton. "She's very close to her girls."

Her brief and very physical circus career was in some ways not unusual. Lee jogs and works out on bars at home. "She's no hothouse flower," Buddy Ebsen drawls, remembering the times Lee rode horseback with her two daughters over the hills of his California ranch.

She likes to hear that. "It takes years," a friend has said, "to shake a Miss America stigma—that you're a pretty face with an empty head and a fragile behind."

Satisfied that she has shaken the stigma, Lee would like to get on with other things now, the most immediate of which is traveling with Tito to Japan and Australia.

Then she'll have to decide what to do about her role as Betty on Barnaby Jones if it continues. And after that, there's her own production company and, of course, married life with Tito.

Few who know her fear that Lee's life will ever turn dull. "My folks used to tell me that if you want to get anywhere in this world you have to work for it," she says.

"I guess the message took, because if I don't have a goal, I get lazy. I hate being lazy."

Then she bounces off to do another scene for Barnaby. "Let's go," she says, clapping her hands. "Everyone get to it!" END

SHEER ENERGY BEATS THE PANTYHOSE OFF ORDINARY PANTYHOSE

We believe Sheer Energy® pantyhose is better than ordinary pantyhose. And we wanted to prove it.

So we asked hundreds of women to wear an unusual pair of pantyhose for a day: one leg of ordinary pantyhose sewed to one leg of Sheer Energy.

What happened? They loved Sheer Energy. They said the Sheer Energy leg felt livelier, bouncier, more energetic. Plus it looked sheer and stylish.

Read for yourself what some of the women said. We think they'll convince you that Sheer Energy is better–better than ordinary pantyhose.

Jackie Stewart—Designer
"The Sheer Energy leg looked sheer and stylish–plus it tingled all over. It felt like it had taken a trip to the Caribbean. The other leg felt like it had stayed home."

Beverly Willis—Housewife
"My Sheer Energy leg felt like it was ready to run a marathon at the end of the day. And my right leg felt like it was ready to retire and go to an old folks home."

Pat Dolson—Flight Attendant
"The Sheer Energy leg felt fantastic. I'm a flight attendant and I wore them to Hawaii and back and my leg never felt better. I felt like I was walking on a cloud the whole day. I was also surprised that Sheer Energy is so sheer."

BASKETBALL ON TV

YEA, COLLEGE! BOO, PROS!

A veteran player-coach-broadcaster says the campus game is more exciting to watch

By Melvin Durslag

It should be established here immediately that Al McGuire, the college-basketball analyst, draws his pay from NBC, the network that televises the games. So when Al says unalterably that college basketball is vastly superior to pro, you are armed with the background you need before hurling your erudition into the argument.

But it is the unwavering judgment of McGuire, who played pro basketball and for 20 years coached amateur—the last 13 at Marquette—that the collegians are winning the battle because of the purity of their game.

"They don't have gimmicks, such as 24-second clocks," says Al. "They play with greater intensity, and the atmosphere in their stadiums is more believable. This includes their cheerleaders. Cheerleaders at pro games move too many parts of their bodies. They work too hard on viewers."

Not many cases are on record of viewers resisting, but flesh shows at pro events upset McGuire almost as much as 24-second clocks.

"The clock served its purpose for 20 years," says Al. "It created high scoring. But it also eliminated the art of defense. You can't even have zone coverage in pro. You must guard man-to-man. Well, when you try to play basketball with only token defense, you don't have real basketball, any more than you would have real football if you limited the number of men rushing."

"But absence of a 24-second clock," he was reminded, "leads to stalling. Is anything more despicable in a sports event than a calculated stall?"

"With aggressive defense," he answered, "a team can break the stall. And once viewers become educated in defense, they find it as exciting as offense. We featured defense at Marquette and sold out every game for 10 years."

It is hard to believe that even connoisseurs appreciate a game whose half-time score runs, say, 13-12. When it does, in fact, you worry that the National Guard could be needed to calm consumers.

"College basketball is played with greater dedication and greater energy," says Al. "You rarely see loafing, as you do in the NBA. There are two reasons for loafing in pro. Financially, many of the players already have it made and needn't kill themselves. And the travel schedule in pro is tougher, forcing players to conserve their strength."

"But how can you start to compare the skills of college players with those of pro?" he was asked.

"The proficiency of the pro players is a bore," he responded. "When pros do a twist-and-jump, it's ho-hum. When a college guy does it, it's a happening. The unpredictable nature of college ball gives it more spice."

Al could also argue that faulty altimeters give flying more spice, but passengers might demur.

Surprisingly, McGuire approves of a scoring gimmick introduced to the NBA this season—a three-point award for successful baskets from 22 feet away and farther.

"What it does," he says, "is stimulate defense. They now must come out and guard the three-point shooter. But the play won't increase scoring in pro. From the three-point zone, a shooter will hit maybe two times in six. From the two-point zone he will hit three times in six. So any way you figure it, six shots will produce six points."

Now in his third season of college-basketball broadcasting, McGuire says he rejected four offers to coach pro teams after winning the national championship at Marquette in 1977.

"It conflicted with my long-range game plan," he explains. "My present job is only temporary. What I aim to do before long is raise sheep on the south island of New Zealand."

But he insists he never has tried to pull the wool over the eyes of college players; he encourages those with pro offers to depart school and snatch the loot. Recalls Al:

"When I was at Marquette, several of our better players dropped out for pro. A priest asked me one day why I didn't try to prevent them from leaving. I answered, 'How can I do that, Father? At their age, in their position, I'd take the money, too.' When the pros waved a contract worth $1,600,000 at one of my kids [Jim Chones], was I going to tell him that earning a letter at Marquette was more important?"

Over the next several years, McGuire pictures college basketball running away from the pros, mainly because of plans to expand the NCAA tournament event further. "Before long," he says, "you will find 64 teams (it increased this year to 48) qualifying. This means that every time fans watch their school in a tournament game—and especially on TV—they will remember the opponent and take a more personal interest in its fortunes in the future. The cumulative effect of this will bring more attention to the game and hurt the pros badly."

Of course, a possible antidote to the college encroachment could be a shift by the pros to NBC. This could give Al a different outlook. END

New technology will enable viewers to call up stock prices, medical advice—a wealth of data—on their screens

By Neil Hickey

Videotex, Viewdata, teletext, CableText, Prestel, Viewtron, Telidon, Teletel, Telset, Inteltext, and Bildschirmtext, Ceefax, Oracle, Antiope, Captain.

Perhaps you've never heard any of those terms, but stick around. All of them relate, in one fashion or another, to startling new ways of using your television set for more than just picking up Laverne & Shirley. And what is this magic new ingredient?

Print. Good old-fashioned printed pages that will appear right on the face of your TV screen. And if the smart money is right, this new kind of television will change your life in some important and even profound ways.

It's all part of what's now called the Information Explosion—which, at the moment, is little more than a firecracker. But it will grow into the multimegaton range in the next decade, fueled by hundreds of millions of dollars already being committed in the United States, Great Britain, West Germany, Japan, Canada, Holland, France, Australia, Sweden and elsewhere.

How, precisely, will it work? Your garden-variety TV set, equipped with a special decoder, will be the display terminal for a theoretically infinite amount of information that can be summoned up at the touch of a key-pad device: news, sports results, stock-market prices, classified advertising, weather, traffic reports, reviews, radio and television logs and reviews, real-estate listings, job-hunting information, travel schedules, cooking, gardening and crafts advice, and home-study courses in every imaginable subject. The TV screen also could become an encyclopedia and dictionary, as well as the "note paper" for an electronic mail and message service and a convenient way to communicate with the deaf. Two-way capability will allow voting, public-opinion polling, retail buying and selling, banking and credit transactions, game playing and home computing.

All those services will arrive in your home via two main bits of gadgetry, the generic names for which are teletext and viewdata. Teletext is older, having been pioneered by the British Broadcasting Corporation a half-dozen years ago, and is now in full operation in Great Britain, where 42,000 homes are equipped to receive it. It's simple and cheap to operate and—best of all—free to the consumer (except for the cost of the decoder). It's transmitted over the air encoded on an unused, or "blank," space on an ordinary TV signal. Teletext allows the viewer to choose from about 800 "pages" of printed material that are continually being broadcast (invisibly until requested) right along with regular programs.

In Britain, two teletext services are available to viewers: one called Ceefax, from the BBC; and Oracle, from Independent Television (ITV), the commercial network. A few years ago, an American broadcast executive named Arch L. Madsen, president of Bonneville International Corp., which owns station KSL-TV in Salt Lake City, studied Ceefax in London, was enthralled by its prospects and promptly got permission of the BBC (and the Federal Communications Commission) to test a similar service in the U.S.

Ever since, broadcasters, newspaper publishers, electronics-equipment manufacturers and government officials "have been visiting us in droves," says Madsen, eager to know how this new tool will affect their lives and fortunes. Teletext "adds a whole new dimension to over-the-air broadcasting," Madsen claims. And he's pretty sure that eventually it will produce enormous advertising revenues for broadcasters who have the vision to get in on it.

CBS conducted its own tests at station KMOX-TV in St. Louis, where they studied British teletext systems and a French one called Antiope.

The second main distribution method for televised print—viewdata—uses ordinary telephone lines instead of over- → the-air transmission. A viewer simply places a phone call to a viewdata computer in which is stored, for easy retrieval, all manner of useful information and services. He is charged for the phone call, and charged also (automatically) for many of the pages that then appear on the TV screen (the specially equipped set is connected to the telephone by an adapter).

Those pages are placed in the computer by companies, called information providers, that pay to have their services included in the data bank. Thus, the viewdata computer is a kind of warehouse in which the information providers rent space and from which the viewers purchase goods, services and information as their needs require. Currently, the British viewdata system is fed by about 160 information providers, including the British Library, the British Medical Association, Barclays Bank, Reuters, the English Tourist Board and The New York Times.

Unlike teletext, viewdata is a complete, two-way, "transactional" device that makes the consumer the master of his own communications needs, including the sending and receiving of printed messages and the purchase of products. Also, viewdata's capacity is theoretically unlimited, as against teletext's current ability to broadcast, in Britain, a menu of up to 300 pages.

As with teletext, the British were the pioneers of viewdata, which is called by the brand names Prestel in Great Britain and Viewdata in the United States. In Britain, the post office operates the telephone service, and back in 1970 a post-office employee named Sam Fedida dreamed up the first viewdata system as a scheme to increase the number of phone calls made daily by Britons, and hence increase the post office's revenue. (It was averaging a meager 1.5 calls per day per instrument.)

In the process, Fedida and the post office took the first few steps toward creating the world's first universal data base: a reservoir in which all the information that a nation needs to function socially, politically, culturally and economically could be stored, and then retrieved by every member of the society.

Last June, the General Telephone & Electronics Corporation, the Nation's second-largest telephone company, obtained a license to offer viewdata services to the public in the U.S. and Canada. In July, RCA announced it had been testing viewdata systems and might proceed with in-home tests in 1980. The Knight-Ridder Newspapers chain has set up a subsidiary called Viewdata Corp. of America, Inc., to operate a service, which they're calling Viewtron, as a hedge against the day when viewdata may constitute a threat to the economic health of newspapers. In late spring, 150-200 families in Coral Gables, Fla., will get the Viewtron service as a test of how consumers will use a TV information-retrieval system.

Recently, 22 of America's largest communications companies (including AT&T, CBS, RCA, Dow Jones and Texas Instruments) chipped in to produce an expensive marketing and technical study on how viewdata may affect each of them in the future. And abroad, viewdata systems are sprouting like weeds in West Germany (where it's called Bildschirmtext), Japan (Captain), Finland (Telset) and Canada (Telidon).

None of which surprises Sam Fedida, who took time out at his London office recently to demonstrate Prestel to TV GUIDE. "This will have tremendous impact in the home," he said. "We'll be able to get information when we want it, and thus be able to make decisions better and quicker than ever before. And this will be a very important source of revenue for the information providers."

profitability, Fedida points out that if three million viewers in Great Britain spent an average of only $100 a year on Prestel, the gross annual revenue would be $300 million. And that average would probably be much higher in the U.S., he claims, because Americans have more to spend and are more likely to experiment with new things.

Right now, TV sets equipped to receive viewdata and teletext signals are fairly expensive: $2000 in Great Britain for a set fully equipped to receive viewdata. The experts are sure, though, that when new sets are mass produced with both teletext and viewdata capability, the cost may be as little as $25 to $50 more than the ordinary price of the set.

TV-set manufacturers have been quick to detect in all this the greatest potential boon to their business since the introduction of color. Obviously, if people in great numbers want these home-information services, they'll eventually decide to junk their present sets and buy new ones that are properly equipped. That fact helps explain the current interest of RCA (which makes TV sets) and GT&E (which owns Sylvania). In Britain, the entire TV-set industry is busily manufacturing the new sets.

Some observers (including a number of network executives) claim that home-information systems are Buck Rogers stuff that won't be economically viable for many years, and besides, the public may never want that kind of service anyway. "That's what all those monks who were copying manuscripts back in the 15th century said when they first heard about printing," says Paul Zurkowsky, president of the International Information Association. "The future shock will be momentous."

Still, obstacles do exist. One of the toughest is the need for electronic standards that would allow TV-set makers to proceed confidently with the manufacture of this new generation of sets and assure compatibility not only domestically but globally, so that—for a long-distance phone call—viewers in the U.S. could tap data banks elsewhere in the world.

Also, teletext constitutes a potential bone of contention between networks and local stations over control of that valuable piece of electronic real estate—the vertical blanking interval—on which teletext is transmitted. KSL's Madsen is adamant that it belongs to the stations themselves and that they have 100 per-cent-ownership rights to the ad revenues that might result, including a share of the newspaper industry's $4-billion-a-year income from classified advertising.

Networks, for their part, tend to be appalled at the prospect of viewers switching off national commercials to watch local teletext news and advertisements. Nonetheless, networks are presumptively on the prowl for new sources of income, in the face of intimations that their economic base will soon grow rickety under pressure from cable TV, pay-TV, videodiscs and the like. They're eager to position themselves (in the view of one insider) to take best advantage of teletext when it starts to gather force—and that could mean a pitched battle with their own affiliates over the lifeblood of both of them: the advertising dollar.

A French television executive speculated recently that by the mid-1980s the home-information-service industry will be a multibillion-dollar business that will help redefine what television is. The investment firm Kidder, Peabody & Co., Inc. says that TV-computer services "to the home via telephone or satellite communications provide an exciting potential market, in our view."

Maybe they're right and maybe they're wrong, but the fuse has definitely been lit and pretty soon we'll know just how big a bang this information explosion will be. END

MYSTERY!

I can almost hear the production meeting. "Let's get three or four of those British miniseries, put them together and call it Mystery!" I'm not sure someone said it, but certainly someone did it. The resulting series on PBS is a strange hodgepodge of stories that range in quality from wonderful to pretty awful.

To start with the pretty awful, there is a Gothic extravaganza called "She Fell Among Thieves." This affects to be a satire, I guess because it carries the Gothic themes to grotesque extremes—a cackling archvillainess prowling the ramparts of a gloomy castle, secret passageways, heroes tossed into dungeons—all that sort of trumpery, overdone to a brown crisp. Eileen Atkins chews up all the draperies in sight as Vanity Fair, a wicked international larcenist and murderess who stalks around a castle in the Pyrenees in 1922, trailing ostrich feathers, spitting withering insults at her flunkies, and plotting to marry off her stepdaughter to grab the girl's fortune. Along comes a nice young man (Malcolm McDowell) who gets tangled in this glutinous web, sets out to rescue the girl . . . I dozed off after the first hour. Preposterous doesn't necessarily equal funny.

A four-part version of "Rebecca"—Gothic for serious this time—stretches Daphne du Maurier's story for an hour more than it needs, but is otherwise a fine, atmospheric telling. Joanna David is the naive, awkward girl who meets the gloomy Maxim de Winter (Jeremy Brett), is taken away to his grim manor house and there is haunted by the shades of his deceased wife Rebecca. I think I prefer the old movie, which gets right to the sinister turns without such a leisurely buildup.

Now for the wonderful: keep your eyes peeled for "Rumpole of the Bailey," four stories revolving around a pricelessly eccentric barrister. Leo McKern, who looks like a British W.C. Fields, is the rumpled Rumpole, a slightly shabby, cagey old courtroom ham who quotes verse and rumbles aphorisms like "an Englishman's gin bottle is his castle." Rumpole is deceptively comical in his mannerisms: in court he is a fox. When a bumptious young lady lawyer takes the opposing side in one of his cases, he has a fatherly talk with her, telling her to quote the law at great length to impress the judge. Rumpole happens to know that the judge is bored stiff by the law, and he walks away with the case. Rumpole trumpets, "Lawyers and tarts, the two oldest professions in the world, and we always aim to please."

In "Rumpole and the Married Lady," the great barrister takes on the divorce case of a couple who for three years have lived together in bitter silence, communicating only by notes. He patches up the marriage, losing a nice fee, and potters off to the next case in a cloud of philosophical oratory, to the great annoyance of his bossy, cozy little wife (Peggy Thorpe-Bates). McKern is superb as the great man, and I hope there are more Rumpole episodes somewhere. If there are, let's get them over here, and hang the balance-of-payments. END

Scriptwriter and co-producer WILLIAM BLINN said the story deals "with the effects of a mandatory-busing order on a middle-sized community in middle America."

The Waltons is not expected to return to CBS for the '80-81 season, and that show's creator, EARL HAMNER, has two other series on the drawing board. "I have two pilots for CBS," Earl said. "One is called 'Thorpe,' a story of a family in rural Arkansas in 1935. The father is a widower, an extreme liberal and a medical doctor. He has two children: a boy, 11, and a girl, 8. The second show is so special, I don't want to talk about it. It's a unique idea." As for the curtain coming down on The Waltons after eight seasons, Hamner said, "The ratings are up, and if the series is going off the network, I'd rather see it go off with dignity."

SUSAN KENDALL NEWMAN is a co-producer on ABC's version of the prize-winning play, "The Shadow Box." It's a family affair: her stepmother, JOANNE WOODWARD, is starring in it and her father, PAUL NEWMAN, is directing . . . PATRICK WAYNE will be the host of The Monte Carlo Show, a variety program featuring American and European stars. The syndicated series will be made in Monte Carlo's Sporting Club . . . Producer STANLEY KALLIS is working on The Manions of America, ABC's six-hour miniseries that tells the story of the wave of Irish immigration to America in the last century.

Edith Bunker won't be visiting Archie Bunker's Place any more this season, and there's been speculation that the character might get ill and die in some future episode. "CARROLL O'CONNOR wants that to happen," a source on the show said. "He's trying to establish Archie Bunker's Place as a separate show." What does JEAN STAPLETON think about the possibility of Edith passing on? "Jean loves Edith," the source said. "I don't think she'll come back and do a death scene for him" . . . LEE REMICK, COLLEEN DEWHURST and PATTY DUKE ASTIN are costarring in "The Women's Room," an ABC movie based on MARILYN FRENCH best-selling feminist novel.
